DETAILED ACTION

1. Claims 1 and 3-15 are currently pending.
2. In the paper dated January 29, 2003, applicant elected with traverse hydrogenated starch hydrolyzate and lactitol for species A, partially hydrogenated soybean oil for species B, lecithin for species C, dietary fibers for species D, carrageenan for species E, hydroxypropylmethyl cellulose for species F, and psyllium for species G.
3. The finality of the Office action of July 25, 2006 is hereby withdrawn and new rejections are presented herein.

Claim Objections

4. Claim 1 is objected to because of the following informalities: the claim lists ingredients a), b) and d) but skips the use of c) to refer to an ingredient. In addition, in line 7, the phrase "has be cooled" should correctly be "has been cooled." Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

5. Claims 1 and 3-15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Bunick et al (US Pat. No. 4,714,620).

Art Unit: 1655

Bunick teaches a soft, sugar free, chewable composition. The composition is claimed as containing 35% to 89% hydrogenated starch hydrolyzate, 1% to 10% cellulose, 0.1 to 7.5% whipping agent, 2% to 10% fat, and 7% to 12% water (see claim 1). The whipping agent is claimed as soy protein (see claim 4). Soy proteins naturally contain lecithin. The fat is claimed as partially hydrogenated oils including soy oil (see claim 5). The composition also contains up to 45% lactitol and/or maltitol (see claim 10). The cellulose are fibers and include hydroxypropylmethylcellulose (see claim 2). The composition also contains up to 5.5% of a thickening agent which is claimed as psyllium and/or carrageenan (see claim 7). The reference teaches that the composition can be shaped into any desirable form including a tabloid shape (see claim 8, lines 42-45). "Tabloid" is a type of tablet (see <http://dictionary.reference.com/browse/tabloid>).

Bunick specifically claims a composition that contains all of the same ingredients as claimed by applicant in the same amounts as claimed by applicant. The reference does not specifically teach that the composition is reheatable; however, since the reference teaches using the same ingredients as claimed in the same amounts as claimed, the reference composition would be reheatable.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

6. Claims 1 and 3-15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Bunick.

The teachings of Bunick are discussed above. The reference does not specifically teach adding the ingredients in all of the amounts claimed by applicant. The amount of a specific ingredient in a composition is clearly a result effective parameter that a person of ordinary skill in the art would routinely optimize. "[W]here the general conditions of a claim are disclosed in the prior art, it is not inventive to discover the optimum or workable ranges by routine experimentation." In re Aller, 220 F.2d 454, 456, 105 USPQ 233, 235 (CCPA 1955). Thus, optimization of general conditions is a routine practice that would be obvious for a person of ordinary skill in the art to employ. It would have been customary for an artisan of ordinary skill to determine the optimal amount of each ingredient to add in order to best achieve the desired results. Thus, absent some demonstration of unexpected results from the claimed parameters, this optimization of ingredient amount would have been obvious at the time of applicant's invention.

7. No claims are allowed.
